

AIMING FOR THE 21st CENTURY...

At GLOCK, we've looked beyond the status quo to respond now to the growing security needs of the coming century. Not by pursuing the old technology that forged the steel revolver, but by mastering a new technology. One that will create a new generation of sidearms.

We call it "polymer technology"—and already it has spawned the remarkable GLOCK 17 and GLOCK 19, 9mm semi-automatic pistols.

With fewer parts and less weight, GLOCK pistols truly represent the handguns of the future. Accurate and reliable, and using advanced ammunition, they have been adopted by NATO and law enforcement agencies around the world.

This is indeed the beginning of a new era. And a tradition that is destined to last well into the 21st century. And we at GLOCK are its vanguard.

THE COVER: Following on the heels of the pistol and smallbore rifle championships, the nearly two weeks of highpower rifle competition at Camp Perry began on August 1. Service rifle competitors at the National Matches will be firing rifles like the Springfield Armory M1A (shown here with Hawkeye Sports shooting coat) at distances ranging from 200 to 1000 yds. Design by Colin Moore, photography by John R. Lamson.
