FEET ARE, FROM LEFT, THOSE OF ARGENTINE QUINTUPLET, SPEAKER MARTIN, RESCUER AT A SHIPWRECK, MODEL IN MAJORCA AND AN OTTER

THE PATTERN OF FEET, TINY AND OTHERWISE

My feet, they haul me Round the House,
 They Hoist me up the Stairs;
 I only have to steer them, and
 They Ride me Everywheres.

Classically, man's symbol of movement has been his feet, as noted by the poet, Gelett Burgess, in the above jingle. Since the world is never static it is hardly surprising to discover that the part of it which we examine in this week's LIFE produces a promenade of assorted feet riding people "Everywheres."

So we have the graceful foot of 9½-year-old María Esther Diligenti, which served to transport her to her First Communion together with her four brothers and sisters. They constitute Argentina's little-known quintuplets shown on pages 11 through 15.

Less shapely but more purposeful are the moving feet of Joe Martin who treads on page 17 from a minority status to the congressional office of Speaker of the House, a symbol of the momentous movement now in progress in Washington as the Republican administration takes over.

The sturdy feet of a Lebanese fisherman go about the gale-lant and dramatic work of rescuing shipwrecked passengers of the liner Champollion on pages 26 through 28.

A fashionable foot traveled far to the island of Majorca to model for you the espadrille, along with other fashions pictured in color on pages 53 through 61. Two irrepressible otters, exhibiting all the artful expression of a ballerina, propelled themselves into LIFE on pages 75 through 79 with feet which carry them through the snow, down the stairs and through the waters of a tank in chase of prey.

Finally on pages 94 and 95 we have the circuitous movements necessary for those who call upon President-elect Dwight Eisenhower in his New York headquarters. There you will find footsteps actually pattering across the pages.
