

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC

OCTOBER 2008 • VOL. 214 • NO. 4

- Last of the Neanderthals 34 Why did our Ice Age rivals vanish?
By Stephen S. Hall Photographs by David Liittschwager
Reconstruction by Kennis & Kennis Photos by Joe McNally
- Painting the Sky 60 The colorful bee-eater bird wings across three continents.
By Bruce Barcott Photographs by József L. Szentpéteri
- India's Fast Lane 72 Superhighways are reshaping the nation's future.
By Don Belt Photographs by Ed Kashi
- Right Whale Watch 100 The North Atlantic species hangs in the balance.
By Douglas H. Chadwick Photographs by Brian Skerry
- High in the Ozarks 122 An uncrowded trail traverses the Arkansas highlands.
By Mel White Photographs by Peter Essick

The roughened skin over this right whale's eye is covered with tiny crustaceans called whale lice. Story on page 100.

BRIAN SKERRY

NATIONALGEOGRAPHIC.COM/MAGAZINE | OCTOBER 2008

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC

MerchMart.com®

Gift Quality Vintage Magazines

The Other Humans

NEANDERTHALS
REVEALED

Flamboyant Bee-Eaters 60

Life in India's Fast Lane 72

Right Whale Watch 100

High in the Ozarks 122