THE MAGAZINE OF HUMAN EXPERIENCE

Mark Brewer	35	Erhard Seminars Training: "We're Gonna Tear You Down and Put You Back Together" Thousands of educated citizens buy $250 tickets for Erhard Seminars Training, the latest pop-psych trip. Most come out inexpressibly pleased, eager to convert friends. A stubborn journalist reports his experiences with est and with the supersalesman who invented it.
Richard P. Marsh	38	The Case for est: "I Am The Cause of My World" A college professor took est training twice, and felt a surge of life.
G. William Domhoff	44	Playgrounds of the Powerful: How Fat Cats Keep in Touch In spas like the Bohemian Grove, members of the U.S. power elite joyfully relax. But amid the play, corporate and political leaders often reach consensus on political, social and economic issues.
Jacques Mousseau	52	The Family, Prison of Love , a conversation with historian Philippe Ariès about the changing nature of the family and the Western revolt against technocracy.
Elizabeth Hall	55	Man on Hobby Horseback , a sketch of Philippe Ariès.
H. P. Zeigler	62	Oral Satisfaction and Obesity: The Sensual Feel of Food Smoking, kissing, nibbling and chewing may be human ways of indulging our sense of oral touch. And, new research indicates, the trigeminal nerve, not the hypothalamus, may be a major cause of overeating.
D. D. Braginsky and B. M. Braginsky	68	Surplus People: Their Lost Faith in Self and System Jobless men feel small, and talk the language of insignificance. Even if a new job patches up self-esteem, they still hurt from a gut-level cynicism about society.
Berkeley Rice	74	Mental Stress in The Economic Crunch: The Worry Epidemic Recessions carry a high price tag. Slumps in the economy lead to dramatic rises in alcoholism, mental illness and suicides.
Emanuel Berman	78	Tested and Documented Split Personality: Veronica and Nelly Childish, tearful Veronica would go to sleep, but aloof, arrogant, sexy Nelly would wake up. An account of a multiple personality and how the split slowly healed.
T George Harris	4	Personal: Wanted; A Higher Class of Worries
John Friedberg	18	Stimulus/Response: Electroshock Therapy—Let's Stop Blasting the Brain Shock treatments can damage brains and wipe out memories. What's more, there's no proof that they work.
Niles Newton	24	Books: Putting the Child Back in Childbirth Three books that place the comfort of mother and child above the convenience of the obstetrician.
Barbara Wersba	25	Books: Religious Mania at a Girls' School In this incisive comedy for young adults, Miss Blue teaches at the Charles School for girls, and her very best friend is Jesus.
Patrice Horn	26	News Line: Paper war in the Army; report card for alternative schools; the Americanization of marriage contracts; and other items.
