THE COVER

All 19 ladies shown competed at Camp Perry this year. Top left, Mrs. Lillian Geer, an English grandmother, talks rifles with Sharon Hickey, 9, of Anchorage, Alaska, probably the youngest regular smallbore competitor, with her stock-shortened Walther UIT Special. The dazzling ladies in red, the Pistolettes of the Tonawandas Sportsmen's Club, Buffalo, N.Y., shot in regular team competition mostly with Hi-Standards. Lower left is the 1971 Randle Team which fired an iron-sight postal match against an English team.

Photography by Rolfe M. Baggett, using a Rolleiflex, Daylight Ektachrome and electronic fill-in flash. Cover design by Ashley Halsey, Jr., and Richard Bohan.

For the complete Camp Perry story, see pages 53-67.

Turn your back on bobwhite!

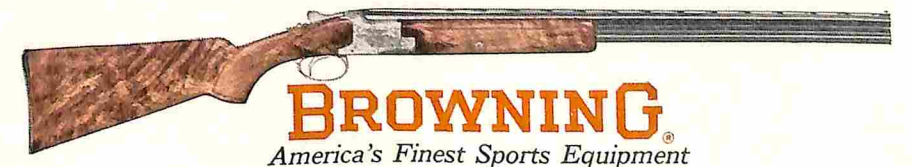

An exploding covey of bobwhite can fly right at you, posing an extremely difficult shot. The tendency is to shoot quick, before the birds reach you, but you'll shoot behind them 9 times out of 10.

The secret is to turn and wait for a going away shot. And if you're shooting a quick handling, fast pointing shotgun like the Browning Superposed, you're in for exciting action. For the Superposed is so finely balanced that even the fastest flyers are fair game.

But the Superposed is more than just a great gun to shoulder, swing and shoot. Rare, old world hand craftsmanship gives it the ruggedness, reliability and refinement to satisfy your most critical demands in a shotgun. In fact, every new Superposed is fully guaranteed against defects in materials and workmanship for as long as it belongs to the original ownera lifetime of satisfying, trouble-free shooting. No other shotgun is sold with such an iron-clad promise of performance.

If you're ready to take that big step up, see your nearest Browning Dealer. Superposed Models are available in four ascending grades for hunting, trap or skeet. 12, 20, 28 and .410 gauges, plus 12 and 20 3" Magnums, from $465.

If you're a stickler for the finest...right down to the stitching in your boots, try Browning hunting clothes and boots. A broad assortment to choose from for the entire family.
