Features

AUBURN 851: The classic Auburn 851 of 1935 didn't set any sales or production records, but it gave America one of its greatest classic thoroughbreds. This is a 1935 Auburn Custom 851 phaeton sedan . . . . . 6

FORD IN '49: Ford Motor Co. was in dire straits after World War II, and it was the all-new '49 model that once again brought joy to Dearborn. With its totally fresh styling and proven mechanics, the '49 Ford was destined to be a hot number. . . . . 16

GAYLORD: Up in the north woods of Michigan, a small auto maker assembled its first motor car in 1910. Just three years later, the Gaylord Motor Car Co. would close its doors forever. It's believed that this 1911 Gaylord Model 30 is the lone survivor. And, appropriately, it's owned by the townspeople of Gaylord. . . . . . 22

427 STING RAY: The 1967 Corvette Sting Ray offered a lot more than exciting styling and sports car handling. Any one of three monstrous 427-cid V-8 engines could be found under the car's scooped hood. This red-on-red '67 coupe is powered by the "baby" 427, the 390-hp version . . . . . 30
