

When you buy your own phone, why not Number One?

Think about just how much you pay each month to rent your present telephone including extensions. You'll find that those charges can really ring up.

Logic will tell you to buy your own phone. And it ought to be one that eliminates the need for expensive extensions: Uniden Extend-A-Phone. The number one best seller in cordless conversation.

We've earned that position because we provide the reliability, the confidence, and the features you demand in something as important as a telephone.

Depending on the model, Extend-A-Phone features include such things as a range of up to 1000 feet, a micro-processor that remembers and dials the numbers you call most often, and a private security code. So why pay for costly extension phones when you can own Number One.
