Next Month

"ANYONE CAN BE a Frogman," almost literally, and that is the title of an aptly named article in next month's Popular Mechanics that takes you into the fascinating new world beneath the surface of the sea. Diving with aqualungs is becoming increasingly popular in this country and abroad and can be as safe as wading in a back-yard pool. Men, women and children are donning face masks and aluminum air tanks to explore the bottom, to fish with spears or just for the sheer pleasure of floating, weightless movement through water, described as "the closest thing to flying." "Anyone Can Be a Frogman" initiates you into the rapidly growing fraternity of fin-footed skin divers
