

ROLLING BLOCKS

... defeated Crazy Horse and Red Cloud — silencing the warwhoop of the redman forever. After winning fame in the American West, in 1867 during the Imperial Exposition in Paris, it was awarded the Silver Medal as the finest military or sporting arm in the world. By 1870 six foreign governments, including Egypt, adopted it as their standard arm. In 1880 it drew blood again while the mother Nile wept red for her fallen sons as the Egyptian Military Rebellion was quelled. The sun can never set on the Remington Rolling Block, for it is still in every-day use throughout the earth's four corners.

ON THE COVER

Here's a hunter who has the whining "killer call" of the bottoms down pat. Greenheads can't resist him. He learned it by sitting with malarkeys and listening to their language. (Three Lions, Inc. Photo)
