JUNE 17, 1963 Volume 18, Number 24

Cover painting by Frank Mullins

- 22 The Step That Changed a Season
Artist Robert Handville re-creates the dramatic—and unphotographed—moment when Mantle crashed into the fence
- 24 The Word Was Griffith
Luis Rodriguez lost his welterweight championship in a fight in which the hardest blow of all was the decision
- 26 The Winner Almost Didn't Start
Two hours before the Belmont, Chateaugay's owners considered scratching him
- 32 Moody Tiger of the Reds
Unloved by opponents, shy among friends, Frank Robinson has become a superstar through talent and fierce will
- 46 New Challenge by an Old Course
Jack Nicklaus presents an exclusive analysis of The Country Club, site of next week's U.S. Open
- 58 Devon Beat the Virus
Despite a flock of cancellations, the East's largest horse show was an artistic and financial success
- 78 Malindi: A Place of Deep Water
When the Aden Current swings in, the sea off Africa's east coast provides excellent big game fishing

TOO MANY PITCHERS is the unique problem in Pittsburgh, where the deepest staff in baseball—including the No. 1 relief man, Roy Face—cannot win a pennant without base hits.

YOUNG SAILORS pictured in color by Stephen Michael look as though they were born with know-how, but the problems of training them are discussed by a noted yachting authority.

POOH-BAHS OF PLAYLAND, Mark Goodson and Bill Todman invented and now produce games that 125 million people play and watch weekly. Gilbert Rogin tells how they do it.
