The Little Miss in Blue

ON ONE of the office walls is the original canvas from which the reproduction of our September cover, painted by Sarah Stilwell Weber, was made. Every morning and evening now, for the past three weeks, since it has hung there, I have wondered what it is that this little miss in blue has discovered on the face of the sundial.

Next, usually, I wonder who accompanied this little girl to the park, for it must be a park. Yes, indeed, I am sure Little Miss Bluebonnet is visiting a park, for Cousin Marion, who conducts The Junior Garden Clubs for the magazine, when I asked her what she thought, said, "Yes, of course. She is a member of the Kinder Garden Club, and the club counselor has taken the members to the park to learn something about Nature."

Cousin Marion is so taken up with this September cover painting that we have arranged to have copies of it, without the lettering and suitable for framing, made for her to send to the counselors of The Junior Garden Clubs of America. It occurs to us that many more of our readers will want copies, too, so we shall have more reprints made than we require for this purpose. If you wish one of them, send 10 cents (to cover the preparation and mailing costs) to Department K, The Service Bureau, Better Homes and Gardens, Des Moines, and we shall be happy to send one to you.—EDITOR.

Do you use IMAGINATION in cooking?

Who would think that Star Bacon could improve the appearance and flavor of a crown roast of lamb? It does, however, in a most surprising way. Our free recipe book with its 36 ways to serve Star Bacon, tells the secret on page nine.

What could you make with some bread crumbs and a few slices of Star Bacon? If you look on page thirteen of our free recipe book, with its 36 ways to serve Star Bacon, you'll find a taste-teasing suggestion—Stuffed Star Bacon Slices. Try it!

Bacon and tomatoes may sound exceedingly ordinary. But just wait until you combine some Star Bacon and ripe, juicy tomatoes as described on page seven of our recipe book, with its 36 ways to serve Star Bacon. There is a dish!

Armour's "STAR" BACON

When you see food arrive fresh from the market or get a glimpse of leftovers in the refrigerator, are you inspired to "do your stuff" in the kitchen? Does cooking intrigue you as an adventure in flavor-finding or as an opportunity to discover ways to give new zest to old dishes?

From the Armour Kitchen in Chicago has come a cook book with 36 WAYS TO SERVE STAR BACON. With a copy of this book and some Star Bacon you are equipped to take familiar foods and leftovers and convert them into dishes that are delicious surprises in flavor and goodness.

It's the rare flavor of Star Bacon that makes it so ideal to use in cooking. That flavor is the result of unusual methods of curing and smoking tender sides of corn-fed pork. And you can always count on having that goodness every time you buy Star Bacon.

Retail meat dealers will gladly fill your order for Star Bacon in window-top cartons that let you see the bacon you buy. Or your dealer will slice Armour's Star Bacon from the original piece. Get some today and be sure to mail the coupon for the 36 WAYS TO SERVE STAR BACON. Unusual suggestions for breakfasts, dinners and suppers, also children's dishes and meals, abound in the Armour recipe book with its 36 WAYS TO SERVE STAR BACON. Armour and Company, Chicago.
