Several years ago a great novel blazed its way into America's consciousness—James M. Cain's "The Postman Always Rings Twice." It was the story of two young people caught in the web of an overpowering love. At the time many of us hoped it would be made into a motion picture. But, the general opinion was: "Too daring... too passionate... too shocking".

Recently, however, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer announced that it had produced "The Postman Always Rings Twice", starring Lana Turner and John Garfield. This was news that made us gasp. And we wondered how M-G-M would handle some of the more audacious scenes.

Well, we have just seen it, and it's a magnificent job. Faithful to the spirit of the novel, tempestuous and at the same time tender, it is worthy of being classed among M-G-M's finest films.

Lana Turner is breath-takingly beautiful as the temptress who is swept away by a love she can't deny. John Garfield turns in a masterful performance as the reckless young wanderer who wanted love more than he wanted life. Together, as Cora and Frank, they create one of the most memorable romances ever brought to the screen.

And to match this great acting, there is a truly fine supporting cast including Cecil Kellaway, Hume Cronyn, Leon Ames, Audrey Totter and Alan Reed. Congratulations are most certainly in order for Director Tay Garnett and Producer Carey Wilson.

To you who look to motion pictures for unusual entertainment, for the magic of romance above and beyond the commonplace, we wholeheartedly recommend "The Postman Always Rings Twice."
