? "FOOLISH QUESTIONS" ?

You've heard of foolish questions no doubt you wonder why That people who will ask them, can expect the same reply.

Did you ever take a girl a box of after tea
And notice how she grabs it, and she says "Is this for me?"
Foolish questions, you can answer you can
"No the candy's for your mother, or your father, or for John the hired man. I just wanted you see it, now I'll take it all away."
Now there's a question you will hear most every day.

And almost every morning there is someone round the place
Who sees you take the shaving brush, and lather up your face.
And you give the razor a preliminary wave,
Some fool will always ask you "Are you going to take a shave?"
Foolish questions, and your answer is "I hope,
thought I'm really not at all prepared for shaving
I just like the taste of soap.
I like to take the shaving brush, and paint my face this way."
Now there's a question that you'll hear most every day.

Suppose the elevator boy forgets to close his doors,
And you should tumble down the shaft past twenty seven floors.
And as you reach the bottom and are lying there inert,
The first one who approaches will exclaim "Oh! Are you hurt?"
Foolish questions, and your dying words are "No!
I was in an awful hurry, and this elevator runs too slow.
I thought I'd save a lot of time by coming down this way."
Now there's a question that you'll hear most every day.

I'm sure many old timers like myself will remember this. Do I have a twin?
