NEXT MONTH

In December, Roger Angell provides a view of the Big City in its busiest, brightest and most exciting role—New York as a premier winter resort. Hamilton Basso explores Havana, a dream city of the past, a philosophy of life and a fun town of today. Herbert Warren Wind investigates the four stubbornly individual settlements that exist side by side on California's Monterey Peninsula, and Lucius Beebe visits Las Vegas, the boom town that keeps right on booming.

NOVEMBER COVER

The remarkable legs on our cover belong to Maria Tallchief, prima ballerina of the New York City Ballet Company, and are Photographer Bradley Smith's nomination for "the ideal ballerina's legs—long, shapely, strong but not muscular." Miss Tallchief, who is 27 and half Osage Indian, recently flabbergasted her admirers by announcing her impending marriage in the following strong terms: "I'd rather be a mother and have lots of babies than a dancer."
