

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC

SEPTEMBER 2008 • VOL. 214 • NO. 3

- Elephants of Samburu 34 An African love story.
By David Quammen Photographs by Michael Nichols
- Desperate Measure 64 The grim practice of culling elephants may resume.
By Karen E. Lange
- Sailfish in the Whirl 70 Sails raised, colors gleaming, they round up prey.
By Jennifer S. Holland Photographs by Paul Nicklen
- Our Good Earth 80 The future rests on soil. Can we protect it?
By Charles C. Mann Photographs by Jim Richardson
- Dirt Poor 108 Haiti's degraded land can't grow enough food.
By Joel K. Bourne, Jr.
- Bolivia's Wrestlers 112 Women compete in petticoats, bowlers, and bling.
By Alma Guillermoprieto Photographs by Ivan Kashinsky
- Lost Tribes of the Green Sahara 126 Uncovering a mysterious Stone Age graveyard.
By Peter Gwin Photographs by Mike Hettwer

MereMart.com®
Gift Quality Vintage Magazines

PAUL NICKLEN

Special cells allow sailfish to change color quickly—from silver to bronze to black—which may help confuse their prey. Story on page 70.

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC

MereMart.com®

Gift Quality Vintage Magazines

WHERE FOOD BEGINS

An Elephant Love Story 34
How Sailfish Hunt 70
Bolivia's Women Wrestlers 112
The Green Sahara 126