SPECIAL EXPEDITIONS AND THE SEA

"...Our Zodiacs were quickly lowered for a closer encounter and within moments, I was eyeball to eyeball with a 50-foot leviathan."

Special Expeditions is dedicated to the spirit of discovery and offers, to this end, year-round voyages to seldom explored areas aboard our 80-passenger M.S. POLARIS.

Perhaps this account by one of our travelers in the waters off Nova Scotia sums it up best:

"There was a light fog as we approached Baccaro Banks, one of the richest marine environments along the Atlantic Coast. The sea was flat and we reduced speed quietly waiting for things to happen. Suddenly a burst of sound—the parting of waters followed by a woosh that signalled a whale. Almost simultaneously the fog broke and a whale breached just 100 yards off the bow. It wasn't just any whale but the Northern Right, the rarest of the world's great whales. Scanning the sea, we saw a dozen or so. Our Zodiacs were quickly lowered for a closer encounter and within moments, I was eyeball to eyeball with a 50-foot leviathan. These gentle giants are known for their relaxed behavior. Time after time, a great head reached out of the sea to inspect the newcomers. It was an unbelievable morning which none of us will ever forget."

We'd like to tell you more about our plans for this September in Canada's Maritimes and beyond.
