SPECIAL SECTION: HUMAN ERROR

Introducing an examination of error, its causes and its cost in today's high-risk world.

42

Post-Freudian Slips

By Donald A. Norman
To Freud, even the most innocent mistake could be traced to hidden motives. But a specialist in the mind's information-processing mechanisms says many of our everyday mistakes are accidents.

52

Is There a Cure for Human Error?

By John W. Senders
No, and perhaps it's just as well. But we can minimize the risk of catastrophic mistakes by redesigning our complex machines as if their human operators mattered.
