AUGUST 1972 VOL. 6, NO. 3

Kenneth Goodall	16	Tie Line Behavior, not physiological conditions, may signal heart attacks; today's mental patients are less crazy and more sophisticated in a much more tolerant society; Congressmen behave like Skinner's pigeons; and other items.
Ronald P. Carver	22	Stimulus/Response: Speed Readers Don't Read; They Skim Studies show that speed-reading courses don't teach faster reading and that, without reading the material, one can do almost as well on comprehension tests as speed readers who have read it.
T George Harris	32	The Mulish Mind of Saul Alinsky
Richard King	35	The Eros Ethic: Cult in the Counterculture A sharp analysis of the writings of Theodore Roszak, Philip Slater and Charles Reich turns up diatribe, condescension, naive optimism, and religiosity—the esthetic masquerading as the religious.
Gordon Bermant	40	Sisterhood Is Beautiful, A Conversation with Alice S. Rossi But so is motherhood and so is marriage. A sociologist and founder of NOW speaks out for a brand of women's liberation that retains the nuclear family.
Gordon Bermant	42	Alice S. Rossi
Alice S. Rossi	44	Anaïs Nin—A Sampler Rossi selects her favorite excerpts from Anaïs Nin's Diary , in which Nin speaks of writers and of women, of womanliness and of sexuality.
William J. Samarin	48	Glossolalia Speaking in tongues may express deep religious feeling, but the glossolalist speaks linguistic nonsense. A linguist examines the phenomenon and discovers that any child can speak in tongues, as can any sufficiently uninhibited adult.
The Right Reverend Alexander D. Stewart	51	A Bishop's Concern A Bishop of the Episcopal Church takes a searching look at glossolalia and examines the snares that await the unwary, from invidiousness to divisiveness.
Stanley E. Seashore and J. Thad Barnowe	52	Collar Color Doesn't Count A national survey of employees indicates that whenever poor working conditions surround a job, the blue-collar-blues syndrome inevitably manifests itself.
Edward L. Deci	56	Work—Who Does Not Like it and Why Payment destroys intrinsic motivation. New research hints that the employer who ties salaries to performance may kill his employees' interest and efficiency.
Martin E. P. Seligman and Joanne L. Hager	59	Biological Boundaries of Learning (The Sauce-Béarnaise Syndrome) Conditioning is not as simple as some would have us believe. How a filet mignon and a case of stomach flu led two psychologists to question the equipotentiality principle.
Gordon G. Gallup Jr.	62	Some Chickens I Have Intimidated Hypnotized animals are not hypnotized at all; they're just scared. Shock will do it, but with chickens, the most effective hypnotizer is an eye—a glass one will do. Chickens, it turns out, are chicken.
