

ELMER KEITH HAILS RANGEMASTER FINEST EVER USED

RANGEMASTER BINOCULARS

We have been testing the new Bushnell Rangemaster 7x35 binocular in comparison with and against everything in the binocular line. Its brilliance, color rendition, light gathering power and definition are superb.

This is not all accomplished by a feather-weight however, as the new glass is both wide and heavy, 29 ounces. It has the amazingly large field of 525 feet at 1,000 yards. This large field makes it the finest glass to locate hidden game with we have ever used. Although of lesser relative power, its extremely wide field and great resolving power made this big glass the easiest on the eyes of any we have used. It proved easier to identify unknown objects and people at great distances with this 7x35 than with both eight and nine power glasses of other makes. Although made in Japan and to retail at the comparatively low price of $125.00, this Bushnell Rangemaster is an excellent binocular.—ELMER KEITH.
