THE COVER

With a catch-me-if-you-can elusiveness that takes him ever upward to dizzying heights, the creamy white mountain goat gives a true test to the lung, limb, and nerve of the hunter. His agility enables him to scamper widely. Mountain goats range over the Rocky Mountains and west coast ranges of North America from Cook Inlet, Alaska, and the eastern Yukon south to western Montana, central Idaho, and northern Oregon. They weigh 165 to 300 lbs. Transparency by Hal Kanzler, Columbia Falls, Mont., taken in Glacier National Park with an Optika 11A single lens reflex, R3 filter for high elevation sunlight, with Ektachrome 120 Professional E-3 film exposed at 1/100 sec. at F/16.

Each new Ruger® model, year by year, has advanced the art of firearms manufacture. Now, the new Ruger M/77 Bolt Action is ready to prove again that Ruger designs always create new standards of performance while preserving traditional style and beauty.

The M/77 is loaded with news: A better way of tightening the action in the stock; tang sliding safety; integral scope mounts and 1" steel rings; adjustable trigger; a hand-checked stock of genuine American walnut conservatively and correctly shaped for modern sporting purposes. The one-piece bolt has a short throw and a handle designed for fast action.

All of the Ruger rifles tell the same story: sophisticated production technology, experienced personnel in brand new factories, rigid quality control, and pride in fit and finish. With the new M/77, Ruger offers a range of sporting rifles, abundant with quality details, for the challenges of every hunting requirement.
