COVER

The gentleman on the cover, shown with a strange-looking piece of gunsmithing equipment, is West Coast barrelmaker Joe Pfeifer. The machine is a barrel straightener, and Joe is using it to put the finishing touch on a barrel of his own manufacture. For more about Pfeifer's barrel-straightening activities, see the article on page 41.

MAY—probably the most popular month of the year—is a grand time to start enjoying the many pleasures binoculars afford. For hunting... sports events... service... recreation... for unforgettable gift-giving—fine binoculars are in a class by themselves.

Remember Mother... May 13th. BUSHNELL's Theatre, Palm-Pocket, Spectator and other "purse sized" glasses were made just for Her! If your wife or sister are Mothers—make them all happy.

HOW To Buy

Q. What is the best way to judge value when buying binoculars?

A. When the integrity of the manufacturer and his brand have won your confidence, the performance of the binocular itself must be tested. The adage: "Proof of the pudding is in the eating" holds especially true for binoculars, and a 30 day trial will conclusively prove the value of any instrument to you. During this month, note carefully if the following specifications meet with your complete liking: 1. Power. 2. Field of View. 3. Weight. 4. Image Brightness. 5. Type of focus (Individual or Central). 6. Suitability of the instrument for your purpose or uses. Both the information found in BUSHNELL's Guide, "How to Select Binoculars," and BUSHNELL's Catalogue will be found most helpful in arriving at the very best value for your needs.

Spectacle Wearers

Q. I get good results from my binoculars without my eye glasses, but often wonder if view would be even better if I could wear my glasses with them?

A. Highly possible. All you need for wearing eye glasses with binoculars is a pair of BUSHNELL's "Shallo-Flat" Eye Cups ($2.00 pair). Flat and shallow, instead of deep, these cups bring your glasses closer to your instrument, creating a larger field of view... better performance. Merely unscrew binocular cups and screw on BUSHNELL's "Shallo-Flats."

Uses Galore

Almost every week customers tell us of new, novel, profitable uses to which they put their BUSHNELL Binoculars. Many are most ingenious—others intriguing—all most interesting. We pass a few of these along to you with the hope that they may be helpful or possibly suggest other good uses.

Locating schools of tunafish on the high seas. Selling large estates, sub-divisions, developments and other real estate. Forecasting the weather. Inspecting high power electrical transmission lines. Photographing horse races. Inspecting buildings, construction, walls, concrete and brick work. Locating lost mountain climbers. Prospecting for rare minerals.

Do you have or know some unusual use for binoculars? If you do, I should be very pleased to hear from you.

If your use is truly practical and worth-while, there is a handsome little gift waiting for you here. Send them in, friends! Remember your questions, problems, suggestions, criticisms are always welcome. Believe us, it's a real pleasure hearing from you.
