LIFE'S PICTURES

Peter A. Leavens, chief photographer for the Amateur Astronomers Association of the New York Hayden Planetarium, flew out to Butte, Mont. with a party of other amateur astronomers to observe the total eclipse of the sun on July 9. Together with George V. Plachy he took the color photographs on page 84, using a Bantam camera with 35-mm. Kodachrome. Leavens writes popular articles on astronomy, makes educational movies and runs the A. A. A.'s camera station on Long Island.

"Quick, Mother, the Loan Shelf!"

WHAT? Your mother never had a Loan Shelf? You never heard of one?

Neither did we, until Matilda Rose McLaren of Springfield, Illinois, wrote us this story:

Her father was a country doctor, in the horse-and-buggy days when hospitals were few and hard to get to. So, when he was called—for anything from typhoid to a blessed event—his wife would rush for the doctor's Loan Shelf.

"She'd assemble atomizers, hot water bottles, crutches, anything the case seemed to call for . . . and pack them into Doc's buggy to be loaned to the patient 'for the duration'."

More often than anything else, says daughter Matilda, into that buggy-back went sheets. Pequot sheets!

"Our only method of sterilization was boiling and more boiling, then drying in the blistering sun. And Mother said she'd never trust any but her favorite Pequot sheets to stand up under all that."

The doctor has retired now, and so have many of the Pequots. But last Summer Matilda Rose went home for a visit and there on her bed was one of those old Loan Shelf sheets—still crisp and white and inviting!

And here's good news for you who want sheets of this old-time sturdiness: Every day more Pequots become available for civilians. If your store should be short, it won't be long till a new supply comes along. So keep asking for Pequots, America's most popular sheets!
