THE MAGAZINE ABOUT PSYCHOLOGY, SOCIETY, AND HUMAN BEHAVIOR

Kenneth Goodall	10	Tie Line Their textbooks teach obstetricians to be male chauvinists; study indicates that policemen who carry guns are more brutal than policemen armed only with clubs; Americans' distrust of their Government has risen sharply; and other items.
Kurt W. Back	28	Stimulus/Response: The Group Can Comfort But It Can't Cure The group movement has shirked its responsibilities to encounter-group participants; a specialist in group behavior urges group leaders to follow code of ethics adhered to by others who experiment with human beings.
T George Harris	42	Introduction
Mary White Harder, James T. Richardson, and Robert B. Simmonds	45	Jesus People A two-year study of a Jesus-movement commune shows that its members don't smoke, don't drink, don't take drugs, don't mess around, don't think women should be uppity, and don't care who runs the country. Their organization prospers.
From the Bible, King James Version	48	Woman's Place The members of the Jesus commune have taken Paul's rules for women to heart.
Rollo May	52	The Innocent Murderers Innocence is not always a virtue; sincerity is not enough. The author of Love and Will shows how the innocent's refusal to take responsibility for his actions can lead to violence.
Herman Melville	58	Billy Budd The shining innocence of Melville's tragic hero blinds Billy to the effect he has on others.
Edward C. Whitmont	63	Jungian Analysis Today Where Freud saw sexual fantasy, Jung touched myth, archetype and fairy tale—the poetic truths of the human present and past. Jungian psychology may be the practical way to renew contact with the sources of our creativity.
Sam Keen and T George Harris	64	Jung Passes the Electric Kool-Aid Acid Test The sedate old analyst has become the patron saint of the Age of Aquarius.
Aniela Jaffé	74	Carl Gustav Jung An intimate account of the man who said, "Thank God I am Jung and not a Jungian!"
Harriet Mann, Miriam Siegler, and Humphry Osmond	76	Four Types of Personalities and Four Ways of Perceiving Time Jung classified personalities into the feeling type, the thinking type, the sensation type, and the intuitive type. Each experiences time in a different way, and each may be either extraverted or introverted.
Diana Deutsch	86	Music & Memory Experiments in the laboratory show that even rats generalize sound on the basis of the octave and that different hemispheres of the brain appear to process verbal and nonverbal stimuli.
Sam Keen	90	Sorcerer's Apprentice, a Conversation with Carlos Castaneda The anthropologist who talked long and often with don Juan now discusses his apprenticeship with the Yaqui sorcerer. He speaks of snakes, coyotes, psychedelic drugs, and Wittgenstein.
Carlos Castaneda	102	Journey to Ixtlan An excerpt from a new Castaneda book in which the sorcerer's apprentice writes about erasing personal history, about white falcons, hunters, dream power, and about not doing.
