16 Tie Line by Kenneth Goodall
Computer-dating customers are less neurotic than typical U.S. college students; a sex researcher finds a physiological difference between homosexual and heterosexual males; a psychiatrist turns up a new, drug-related personality disorder in adolescent boys; and other items.

23 Stimulus/Response: by Lionel Tiger
The Primate Pilgrimage—From Bananas to Ballots & Robin Fox
All behavior is biological, argue the authors of The Imperial Animal, and human politics is only a pale descendent of primate competition for the fertile female.

40 "Some Idiot Raised the Ante" (an Editorial) by T George Harris

43 Field Report: Janov & Primal Therapy by Sam Keen
Arthur Janov's Primal Scream and his claims for Primal Therapy have generated much heat; a visit to The Primal Institute in Los Angeles lets in a little light.

47 George Wallace's Constituents by Thomas F. Pettigrew, Robert T. Riley & Reeve D. Vanneman

While most Wallace backers are rabidly anti-Negro, three Harvard social psychologists show that economics—not racism—is the main key to his support in the North.

50 Her Body, the Battleground by Judith M. Bardwick
A mature woman's emotions run in cycles that coordinate with her menstrual rhythm, and the contraceptive pill may alter her mood, or even cancel cyclic effects.

57 Prostitutes by Charles Winick & Paul M. Kinsie
Vietnam, tourist travel, and singles weekends can add to the U.S. prostitute population, while narcotics control, poverty programs, and situation ethics may cut it.

61 Redpants by Gail Sheehy
A composite portrait of a prostitute—a chippie in red-velvet pants skidding from Waldorf girl to desperate, homeless hooker who works the scavenger shift.

62 Mother & Child in Africa— by James P. Breetveld
A Brief Conversation with Thomas Lambo
A Nigerian psychiatrist talks about African attitudes toward life, and the African style of mothering, and how urbanization and rapid socioeconomic change threaten them.

65 Magic & Medicine, A Sketch of Thomas Lambo by Carol Tavris

66 When Disaster Strikes by E. L. Quarantelli & Russell R. Dynes
Faced with fire, flood, hurricane or earthquake, people neither panic nor flee; victims respond with self-reliance and mutual help, coping with most emergencies.

72 The Children Have Outgrown the Schools by James S. Coleman
In our information-rich and action-poor culture, society has assumed the school's classical function; the teaching of children can no longer be its primary goal.
