JUNE 1975 | VOL. 9, NO. 1

THE MAGAZINE OF HUMAN EXPERIENCE

Arnold J. Mandell	39	Pro Football Fumbles the Drug Scandal The NFL's first team psychiatrist tells why Sunday's heroes psych up on speed and come down on grass—and how an honest attempt to deal with the situation made the Chargers the scapegoat of the National Football League.
Lawrence E. Marks	48	Synesthesia: The Lucky People With Mixed-Up Senses By synesthesia, a voice can spark brain images of color or taste as well as sound. Information from one sensory department crosses to another in regular and amazing ways.
Ken W. McCluskey	50	Cristina's Color-Drenched World An ordinary psychologist studies his wife's special gift for hearing in bright colors.
Margie Casady	57	"We Must Combat the Myth That We Are a Child-Centered Society," a conversation with Marian Wright Edelman about society's pushed-out children.
Margie Casady	60	Impatience with Small Talk, a sketch of Marian Wright Edelman.
Robert L. Kahn, Barbara A. Gutek, Eugenia Barton, and Daniel Katz	66	Americans Love Their Bureaucrats, but distrust Government. Those supposedly insolent Government officials turn out to be nice, helpful people who often walk an extra mile for a client. Despite their own happy experiences with government agencies, Americans continue to hold a dim view of bureaucrats in general.
Akira Morishima	72	His Spirit Raises the Ante for Retardates The artistic talent of Yoshihiko Yamamoto, IQ 47, shows why a wise society will not write off its mentally retarded.
Donald I. Warren and Rachelle B. Warren	74	Six Kinds of Neighborhoods: Parochial, Diffuse or Stepping-Stone? It's not income, ethnic group or social level that determines whether a neighborhood is friendly or cold, active or indolent. The failure of urban renewal may rest on bureaucratic ignorance of neighborhood structure.
Donald I. Warren and Rachelle B. Warren	76	A Community Leader's Handbook: Different Strokes for Different Neighborhoods A practical guide to gearing for action.
J. R. Block	84	Attention Failure: A Test That Tells Who is Accident-Prone When attention lags, accidents follow. A new test may pick out bad risks at hazardous jobs.
T George Harris	4	Personal: Say It Ain't So, Ms. Baxendale
Robert E. Ornstein	12	Books: Nostalgia for the Time of Plenty Doris Lessing's new novel takes us into a grim future and the dissolution of western civilization.
Barbara Helfgott	12	Books: Lessons From a Warrior's Shield A British novel for children explores The House in Norham Gardens and tackles the nature of Time.
Leonore Tiefer	15	Books: Psychology in the Eye Eckhard Hess, who founded the study of pupil-size changes, tells where 14 years of research has led us.
Ann Faraday	16	Books: All the World's a Stage Scripts People Live , the latest book on Transactional Analysis, claims that each human life plays out a script—but TA can change the casting.
Craig Haney and Phillip G. Zimbardo	26	Stimulus/Response: The Blackboard Penitentiary—It's Tough to Tell a High School from a Prison It's a place that values uniformity, efficiency, security and surveillance; as long as the inmates are within its walls, regulations rule their behavior. It's a high school.
Patrice Horn	32	News Line: Fractured families put childhood on the skids; the joys and sorrows of a geranium; how conversational disclaimers keep the social fabric together; and other items.
