
or did not do, as a family. Britain's Queen Elizabeth has been on the cover five times, more than any other woman, but never with Prince Philip, who made it once in his own right. Between them, Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt were reported in twelve cover stories (she in four and he in eight), but they too never appeared together. All told, only 14 couples have been featured together, led by Generalissimo and Madame Chiang Kai-shek, who were pictured twice. Jacqueline Kennedy was a solo cover subject days interviewing Gould at his Greenwich Village home. She also talked with Gould's mother Lucille. Researcher Patsy Beckert added further insight by interviewing his father, Bernard Goldstein, and people from his early show business days. West Coast Correspondents David Whiting and Martin Sullivan rounded out the report to Jay Cocks, who wrote the finished story, and Peter Bird Martin, who edited it.
